Abstract: The paper presents a concept of the financial public law act as statement of will issued by public authorities, different in scope and effect, which produce financial legal effect. It examines the basic types of such acts in financial law as a branch of public law and the main forms for establishing of prescriptions for conduct (or rules of law) in this legal sphere. The exposition outlines the legal essence and specifics of normative and non-normative (jurisdictional, general and individual) acts, related to the formation, use and control of the public finances, the governance in monetary policy, as well as the regulation and supervision over the private financial sector.

Keywords: finance, prescriptions for conduct, law-making, law enforcement, legal acts, state authorities
